When Group Study Helps

- Explaining a topic to a friend deepens your own understanding.
- Groups help clear doubts quickly.
- Different members bring different strengths.
- It keeps you accountable and motivated.

Making It Productive

- Keep the group small (3–4 people) and focused.
- Set a clear agenda and time limit for each session.
- Assign topics so each member teaches one.
- Avoid distractions – study first, chat later.

Balance With Self-Study

- Group study is for doubts and discussion, not first learning.
- Do your own reading before the group meets.
- Practise problems alone to test real understanding.
- Combine both for the best results.
